Churchill Arrives in Quebec To Meet Roosevelt

War Conferences With President Will Start Soon

British Leaders Also Reach Canada

QUEBEC, Sept. 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill has arrived in Canada for his Quebec meeting with President Roosevelt in an unobtrusive manner, contrasting strangely with his colorful character and the international importance of the event.

His arrival was announced by Canadian officials to a conference of correspondents in the Chateau Frontenac, where he and Roosevelt will confer, without an appearance of the prime minister himself on the scene.

It was disclosed that the prime minister had landed at Halifax this afternoon and that he, Mrs. Churchill and his advisors were proceeding to Quebec aboard two special trains.

The announcement released here, where the two Allied chieftains are to confer, said:

"Mr. Churchill has arrived in Canada, accompanied by Lord Leathers, minister of war transport, Lord Cherwell, paymaster-general, and the British chiefs of staff. Mrs. Churchill and Lord Moran are also traveling with the prime minister."

"The British chiefs of staff are: First Sea Lord, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, Bart. GCB, DSO."

"Chief of the Imperial general staff, Field Marshal Sir Alan F. Brooke, GCB, DSO."

"Chief of the air staff, marshal of the Royal Air Force Sir Charles Portal, GCB, DSO, MC."

"In addition to the chiefs of staff, Major-General R. E. Laycock, DSO, chief of the combined operations command, and General Sir Hastings Ismay, KCB, DSO, chief of staff to the prime minister as minister of defense, are with the party."

Lord Moran is the personal physician to the prime minister.

The ancient Chateau Frontenac was reserved for the official parties of the visiting leaders.

In nearby resort hotels newspapers and photographers were quartered.

Just a year ago, Roosevelt and Churchill met here and announced the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme Allied commander in Southwest Asia.

Plan To Crush Japs
Again this year the Far East is expected to figure prominently in their discussion. In authoritative sources it was reported that Mr. Churchill had suggested the conference primarily as a means of stressing Britain's intention to fulfill to the hilt her promises that Japan will be crushed utterly.

10,000-Ton Jap Tanker Is Sunk

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Monday, Sept. 11 (AP)—Catalina flying boats sank a 10,000-ton Japanese tanker near Zamboanga, Mindanao island, Friday, headquarters announced today.

This was the second strike near that Philippine city, 230 miles west of Davao.

Liberators showered a record of 30 tons of bombs on the Celebes the same day.

They wrecked three parked planes, while escorting Lightning fighters sank two small vessels.

Another flight of Liberators sweeping over the Banda sea destroyed or damaged five grounded Japanese planes in the Kai islands Friday. This group lies between Timor and New Guinea.

Strong forces also continued their realization of Halmahera island, southern stepping stone to the Philippines Friday.

Liberators and Thunderbolts swept the island, meeting heavy anti-aircraft fire, but no aerial interception.

They were fighting at a point only fifty miles south of Zagreb, where Pavelic has ruled as leader of a puppet regime said to have slaughtered hundreds of thousands of Serbs, Jews and Partisan sympathizers since its installation in 1941.

Even if Pavelic has not been captured his days apparently are numbered because Tito's troops, aided by the approaching Red army in the east and systematic Allied aerial destruction of Nazi communications radiating from Zagreb and throughout the Balkans, has effectively blocked the escape routes of perhaps 250,000 Axis troops in the lower Balkans.

Cleanup in Bulgaria
In capitulated Bulgaria the Red army was cleaning up scattered German remnants and moving toward a quick liquidation of the pocketed enemy troops in neighboring Greece and Yugoslavia.

CAPTURED GERMAN SOLDIER, AGE 10

AMONG PRISONERS taken by the Allied forces at Antwerp, Belgium, is this ten-year-old boy who poses with his major, also a prisoner. It appears that Hitler has not only exhausted his manpower but his "child-power" as well for this little fellow was in kindergarten when World War II began. French Battling Nazis 16 Miles South of Belfort

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP)—An Axis American Broadcasting Station in Europe broadcast monitored by CBS said tonight that French troops were reported fighting only two and half miles from Belfort.

By NOLAN NORGAARD

ROME, Sept. 10 (AP)—French troops have struck within sixteen miles of Belfort and are engaged in bitter fighting against Germans defending the gap leading into the Black forest of Southwest Germany, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

The battle raged near the village of Blamont, sixteen miles south of Belfort, and thirty-six airline miles from the German frontier. The French had pushed on through the Jura Alps after taking the villages of Pont de Riode and St. Hippolyte.

Americans Advance
Americans striking toward Belfort from the southwest had driven along the Doubs river to within twenty-four miles of the sentinel city, covering half the distance from Besancon.

Far to the west, other French units pushed up the west side of the Saone river against apparently large German forces whose retreat route to the Reich had been cut, and occupied Urvy and Chamboeuf, nine miles southwest of Dijon.

Americans captured Dole, twenty-five miles southeast of Dijon, in the Dobs valley, as enemy resistance there began to weaken.

Belfort's fortifications can both defend the town itself and harass with artillery the entire pass between the Vosges and Jura mountains.

Pass Protected France
A front dispatch declared the pass—which for centuries has protected France against Germany—may become the first bloody battleground of a Nazi attempt to beat back the southern phase of the Allied march on Berlin, especially if the enemy has thrown reinforcements into that mountain area.

A headquarters officer commenting on broadcast reports that the Seventh army had joined with the American Third army declared such reports arose from a meeting of Lt.-Gen. Alexander Patch's troops with a certain group of armed French patriots.

The bag of prisoners swept up in the push from the Mediterranean coast beyond 70,000, some 40,000 of

Americans Bomb Southern Part Of Philippines

Jap Island Bases Get Hard Pounding

By RAY CRONIN
Associated Press War Editor

Japanese expectations that American forces are about to begin major military operations against the Philippines were given added weight Sunday as radio Tokyo reported heavy United States aerial smashes against the southern end of that archipelago and its island guardians on the east and the north.

American bombers continued to hit Japanese island bases on the Philippines southern flank.

Bomb Mindanao Island
Tokyo reported 300 Yank carrier-based fighters and bombers from a naval task force blasted Mindanao island, southernmost of the Philippines, on Saturday. It added that 1,000 American planes attacked Uap and Palau islands, east of the Philippines, Thursday and that more than 700 were over the same targets Friday.

Domel reported American planes, flying out of China, raided Formosa, immediately north of the Philippines.

Official United States navy reports Saturday said warships and carrier planes raided the Palau Wednesday. Simultaneously Tokyo said battleships and cruisers shelled Yap.

American Southwest Pacific fliers dropped 150 tons of explosives on Mandao, north Celebes, and hit airbases and gun positions on Halmahera island, 300 miles south of the Philippines.

Americans Strike West
Meanwhile Gen. Douglas MacArthur's amphibious forces made another westerly move in the direction of Halmahera. They seized Soeporo island, in Geelvink bay of Dutch New Guinea.

A Japanese Imperial headquarters communique claimed Friday's B-29 Superfortress attack on Anshan, Southern Manchuria, was launched from a base in China near Chengtu, 175 miles north of Chungking. It further claimed that forty of the B-29s were down or damaged before and during the raid and in an attack on the base. The Japanese acknowledged the loss of six planes.

One Superfortress Missing
Washington reported one B-29 missing. Associated Press advised from a Superfortress base in China that a small number of Japanese planes made an "aggressive fizzle" of attacks on two B-29s falling to hit even the runways.

A Chinese high command communique said Japanese forces driving toward Kwelin, Kwangsi province, have not crossed the Hunan border line. When last reported the invaders were at Tungan, ninety miles from Kwelin. Earlier they had taken the American air base at Lingling.

The Japanese claimed capture of Hsinning, forty miles northwest of Tungan.

The Chinese retained their grip on Changling, thirty-seven miles south of Japanese held Hengyang, Hunan railway center.

Sink Japanese Destroyer
American medium bombers, in widespread sweeps over China, hit the Lingling airfield, sank a Japanese destroyer and a sailing ship south of Hongkong and four freighters in the South China sea, and peppered other airbases, shipping and supply lines.

The Japanese defending besieged Tengchung, their major base in China's Yunnan province near the Burma frontier, were being compressed into one corner of the city of which the Chinese held seven-eighths.

In Western Burma British Indian troops made gains along the Tiddim road as they pursued the retreating Japanese toward the Manipur river. RAP planes attacked a rail line in lower Burma and bombed shipping south of Rangoon.

A free Yugoslav radio broadcast said Tito's Partisans had captured Zajecar, only about five miles from the Bulgarian frontier, in their drive to link up with the Red army sweeping through capitulated Romania and Bulgaria.

In this photo of the first daylight raid on the Jap mainland since Gen. Doolittle's daring mission, huge columns of smoke from fires started by the Yank bombers can be seen curling skyward. 170,000 Racing Fans See Soviet Derby and Winners Get a Fortune

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP)—Berezin, which in English means birch-tree, won the twentieth consecutive running of the Russian derby today before 170,000 spectators.

Capt. Arthur Cox of the British military mission played a hunch on the derby—that's what it's called even in Russian—and won 48,000 rubles.

Russian racing is something to challenge the wits of the most hard-bitten horseplayer—because you not only have to pick the winner, but also second place in the same race.

The average bet is fifty rubles and the payoff is at terrific odds—as it should be.

The scene at the Russian race-track on Derby day is not unlike the American racetrack on some big occasion.

There is a paddock. There is a grandstand. And there is a bar.

James L. Bumgardner Dies in Beckley

BECKLEY, W. Va., Sept. 10 (AP)—James Lewis Bumgardner, 78, retired Beckley attorney, former coal operator and one-time ardent foe of prohibition in West Virginia, died of heart failure in a hospital here today after a long illness.

Bumgardner was one of the organizers of the West Virginia branch of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and headed a state united retail council in 1932.

He was a native of Staunton, Va., where he served a year as prosecuting attorney, but had been a resident of Beckley for forty years.

As an attorney he had a large corporation practices among a number of railroad and coal concerns until his retirement in 1926.

Dog Biscuits for Liberated People Of Europe Proposed by Dr. Carlson

By FRANK CAREY
Associated Press Science Writer

CLEVELAND, Sept. 10—Dr. Anton J. Carlson, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said tonight a new human food material "made from the same food substances which we now put into dog biscuits" could be developed as an aid in the feeding of liberated people after the war.

The University of Chicago scientist said such a food possibility was only one example of the more extensive human use of available food materials that could be made by a nation "which wastes more food than any other on the face of the earth."

"We could feed between five and ten million people with the food of various kinds that we waste," he said in an interview on the eve of the association's first wartime meeting.

"We could feed thousands of people in Europe after the war for example, with a food having the same materials as dog biscuits. These are waste materials and while they serve an admirable purpose in feeding dogs and certain other animals, there are sufficient supplies of them to make perfectly edible human foods. Dog biscuits are perfectly good, perfectly balanced foods."

Dr. Carlson, who served on Herbert Hoover's Food commission in Europe after the last war, said the United Nations had food supplies "reasonably adequate" to feed European peoples after the war but that "there's nothing we can do to meet adequately the situation which will prevail in China and India because of the over-population that exists."

Russian Troops 18 Miles Inside Transylvania

By TOM YARBROUGH

LONDON, Sept. 11—Russian troops attacking on a 225-mile front yesterday penetrated eighteen miles into Hungarian-annexed Transylvania in their accelerated drive to knock Hungary out of the war, and a Moscow dispatch said they were closing fast on Cluj, capital of the big plateau province and rail heart controlling Axis defenses.

(Bern radio in a roundabout report said Cluj had been captured, but this was not confirmed by Moscow.)

Near Prewar Border
Although Moscow did not announce any gains on the western end of the curving front since Saturday's capture of Tetus, only thirty-seven miles south of Cluj, a dispatch said the Russians in that area were within 100 miles of the prewar Hungarian border and within 220 miles of Budapest.

The Soviet communique said a Soviet column attacking inside Southeastern Transylvania and along the eastern side almost as far north as the old Polish frontier had captured nearly sixty towns and villages during the day, and forced another Carpathian mountain pass into Transylvania.

German broadcasts, reporting meanwhile on other sectors about which Moscow was silent, said Soviet units racing through capitulated Bulgaria had crossed the Eastern Balkan mountains in their drive toward Greece's Aegean Sea coast.

Juncture with Partisans
Berlin also said Soviet parachute troops had landed south of Turnu-Severin, on the Danube river section of the Yugoslav frontier. This possibly meant a Red army junction with Marshal Tito's Partisans, although the Germans declared the parachutists had been wiped out.

It is estimated that 250,000 Axis troops already are cut off in Yugoslavia, Greece and Albania.

In the Transylvanian operations Red army columns pushing up the Brasov-Turcu-Mures railway captured Santul-Gheorghe, eighteen miles above Brasov, and pushed on through Bistritza, fifteen miles to the north—an overall penetration of eighteen miles into present Hungarian territory.

Governorship, Three Congressional Seats, at Stake in Maine Election

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10 (AP)—The governorship and three Congressional seats go on the election block in Maine tomorrow. Republicans, confident of victory, are seeking to maintain traditional majorities, while Democrats are aiming for places they have not held since 1943.

Of prime interest to political leaders will be the success or failure of the CIO Political Action committee's Maine slate, the Maine United Labor committee, which endorsed two of the Democratic Congressional candidates.

Outstanding in the contests is that in the first district where Republican Robert Hale, Portland lawyer, seeks a second term in the House against the opposition of Democrat Andrew A. Pettis, president of the Portland local of the CIO Shipyard Workers Union.

Pettis has the United Labor committee endorsement.

In the second district, Republican Margaret Chase Smith, who in 1940 succeeded her late husband, Clyde H. Smith, seeks her third full term. Opposing her is David H. Staples, retired locomotive engineer, who also has the ULC endorsement.

Mrs. Smith has received the endorsement of two prominent Maine American Federation of Labor officials and both she and Staples have had the backing of railroad union leaders.

In the third district, Republican Frank Fellows also seeks a third term with Ralph E. Graham, (D) a railroad office worker, opposing him. State Senate President Horace Hildreth aspires as the Republican candidate to succeed Gov. Sumner Sewall and the Democratic candidate is Paul J. Julien, a past state commander of the American Legion.

Big Guns Fire Across Border For First Time

U. S. Third Army Now in Luxembourg

By WILLIAM F. BONI

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, Sept. 11 (AP)—Artillerymen of the American First Army in Belgium fired their first shots onto German soil near Aachen at 3:30 p. m. Sunday as other First army units formed a juncture with the British second army on the Albert canal above Hasselt.

American army patrols are within eight and a half miles of the German and Dutch frontiers. Liberation for Luxembourg approached as American Third army headquarters reported the entry of United States troops into the Duchy's capital. Other Americans pressed deeper into the Ardennes forest toward the Siegfried line.

Swift Advances Reported
It was another day of swift-moving advances for the first army, command by Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, which up until midnight Saturday had taken 168,047 prisoners since D-day. From no single sector of the wide advance was there any indication of a serious check to First army forces, which are rapidly closing in to deliver the Allies' first massive blow against the Reich's western defense line.

The American First Army also captured the city of Verrier, east of Liege, and supreme headquarters confirmed the entry of Canadian patrols into Zeebrughe, which took them within three miles of the Netherlands frontier.

The British Second Army captured 12,135 prisoners in three days.

Cross Luxembourg Border
A field dispatch from Third army headquarters reported without confirmation the entry into the city of Luxembourg, lying in the southern section of the tiny Duchy overrun by the Germans in 1940, but it followed closely an official announcement that the Americans had crossed the Luxembourg border.

(The Germans declared the Americans had launched a great drive all along a sixty-mile front from east of Liege to the southern border of Luxembourg aimed at piercing the heart of the industrial Rhineland.)

To the north of Luxembourg, the first army unopposed a powerful offensive which rolled east fourteen miles to within twelve miles of the Siegfried line fortress of Aachen, gateway to the Rhineland and Berlin, 340 miles beyond, without a hint of a serious check.

Chairman Tait Scores Tydings

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10 (AP)—Chairman Glen L. Tait of the Republican State Central committee today said Senator Tydings (D-Md.) "oversees by far the most examples, has chosen to commit political hara-kiri."

In the first attack by any major Maryland GOP figure on Tydings' candidacy for re-election, Tait claimed that Tydings' "statement last week on his position during the campaign contains an excess of fear and an utter lack of firmness, depressing to his friends and delighting his foes."

Declaring that Maryland would vote Republican in the November presidential election, Tait said that Tydings' opponent, Blanchard Randall, "is growing day by day."

"A new broom should sweep clean and a Congress should be chosen to assist a constructive Republican president or to clamp down the brakes should, unhappily, the present president, through the corrupted vote, be elected to a fourth term," Tait said.

In the second district, Republican Margaret Chase Smith, who in 1940 succeeded her late husband, Clyde H. Smith, seeks her third full term. Opposing her is David H. Staples, retired locomotive engineer, who also has the ULC endorsement.

American Troops Near Gothic Line

(By The Associated Press)

ROME, Sept. 10.—American troops have driven into the outskirts of Pistoia and reached the threshold of the Germans' Gothic line while along the Adriatic Nazis battled fiercely to keep the British out of Rimini, gateway to the Po valley. Allied headquarters announced today.

Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring in the desperate effort to block the Allied drive hurried armored units and infantry into strong counterattacks against the British, nine miles southwest of Rimini and five miles inland from the coast.

Two miles west the British were fighting off German assaults on Gemmano. The situation there was "not regarded as settled."

American troops moving forward as the Germans retreated into the Northern Italian Apennines pushed into the outskirts of Pistoia, a rail and communications hub of 72,000 about twenty miles northwest of Florence. American patrols reached Gothic line outposts between Pistoia and Lucca.

In the high ground between the upper Arno and Tiber river valleys, Indian troops of the eighth army captured several points and successfully beat off an enemy counter-attack west of Castelnuovo, twelve miles from the coast.

North of Florence G. Alexander's headquarters reported "big advances" made by the Tenth Army. Monte Calero and Monti De Calvane were in Allied hands. In this sector British troops, for the first time, overtook the upper Sieve valley.

Although rain hampered aerial activity, Allied warplanes struck at enemy communication lines and at the front lines.

Both bombers and fighters blasted targets near Rimini, in support of the British drive.

Other planes carried out sweeps over the Yugoslav, Greece and Albania attacking oil tanks, gun positions, and communications.

No losses were reported.

Quisling

called on Hungarians to overthrow the Nazis and join the Allies.

An imminent juncture in force between Tito's men and the Red army is likely, if it has not already occurred. Russian troops in Western Romania reached the Yugoslav frontier at Turnu-Severin last week.

A point only fifty miles north of Zajevar, captured by the Partisans.

Nazi 'Chutists Killed
A Berlin broadcast also said Soviet parachute troops had landed but had been wiped out south of Turnu-Severin, which could be in Yugoslav territory.

The Greek government in exile in Cairo, headed by Premier George Papandreu, transferred its temporary seat to Naples today in expectation of an early entry into Athens.

A firmer Soviet attitude toward Turkey was visible in Moscow now that the Red army is practically on the frontier of that nation whose persistent neutrality has long irked the Russians.

Bulgaria's request for an armistice in the now ended four-day-old war with Russia, and her declaration of war against Germany, has eliminated the last major German influence in the Balkans, but Moscow points out there still are German troops in that country.

Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin, Third Ukrainian army commander whose troops have overrun Bulgaria, has put it up to the new pro-Allied Bulgarian government under Premier Kimon Georgiev to disarm German troops in that country.

If help is needed, the Red army is ready to divert forces to any threatened sector. It is estimated that Bulgaria has twenty divisions which it can hurl into the fight to make Hitler's Balkan disaster complete.

French Battling

them taken by Frenchmen, mainly in the ports of Marseille and Toulon.

Many Germans Captured
There were indications considerable numbers of Germans were virtually trapped in the Dijon area, forty-seven miles west of Besancon and eighty-seven west of Belfort. Opposition to a French advance twelve miles below Dijon and west of the Saone river was stubborn. This suggested there were substantial forces of Germans there whose avenues of retreat to the homeland already had been cut.

5,000 Bombers Blast Nazi Area In Record Raids

By ERNEST AGNEW
LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Nearly 5,000 bombers and fighters from Britain and Italy blasted enemy targets from the channel to Germany and Austria today in one of the heaviest dawn-to-dusk assaults since the invasion of the continent.

More than 1,100 British-based Flying Fortresses and Liberators fanned deep into Germany smearing the Dalmier Benz motor plant at Gaggenu, southwest of Karlsruhe; aircraft and tank factories in the Stuttgart, Nurnberg and Ulm areas; and a large airport at Giebelstadt, south of Wurzburg.

Le Havre Bombed
RAF planes battered besieged Le Havre during the morning and again this afternoon.

From Italy 500 heavy bombers of the Fifteenth air force attacked oil refineries and other targets in the Vienna area, flying through a sector which once swarmed with enemy fighters without encountering opposition. Fortresses attacked the Lobau and Nova Schwechat refineries about seven miles southeast of Vienna, and a second wave of Liberators battered the same targets, which were burning fiercely from the earlier attack. Anti-aircraft fire was intense over the targets.

Other Italian-based Liberators and medium bombers attacked targets in Northern Italy and Hungary, including the Trieste harbor.

Blast German Bridges
Ninth air force Marauders and Havocs in direct support of the Allied armies fighting their way toward the German border, blasted bridges, troop concentrations and communications and transport immediately ahead of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's United States Third Army in the Metz-Nancy area.

The day's air operations started just before dawn with RAF Lancasters making a heavy attack on Munchen-Gladbach, key communications center through which traffic from the Ruhr and Cologne is funneled to the Belgian border and Holland. More than 239,000 incendiaries alone were hurled down on railway yards and warehouses causing fires which were visible more than sixty miles.

Gen. Patton summoned the Marauders and Havocs which blasted enemy installations in his path. Pilots reported medium to light flak directly over the targets but no enemy fighters, and said the results were excellent.

All Marauders and Havocs returned.

Would Repeal Profits Tax
One that Congress announced it will repeal the excess profits tax, after Japan is defeated, and that it consider the advisability of permitting manufacturers to write off substantial depreciation of new machinery in the year in which it is purchased.

"Before a man puts his own money in a business he wants to know that there is some prospect of his making a profit," Byrnes said.

Postwar repeal of the excess profits tax on corporations has been advocated a long time in Congress and is backed by men of great influence on the tax-writing committee.

However, some leaders have been reluctant to try to commit Congress now to definite action at an uncertain time in the future. Byrnes said the tax should not actually be repealed until after defeat of Japan.

advanced positions of the Siegfried line.

The United States Third Army, attacking along the Moselle river in the southern front facing the Saar basin, was putting armor and infantry across the stream as the battle raged with mounting intensity around Toul.

A new and sixth crossing was forced south of Metz, but the Germans were fighting back hard and efforts to expand the bridgehead made little progress and American losses were considerable.

But European war problems also clamor for consideration.

They include:
1. The military government of Germany after her armies are defeated.

2. The still-hazy outline of the organization to direct Europe's rule between V-day and creation of a permanent peace organization such as that now being sketched at Dumbarton Oaks.

3. The manifold economic troubles inherent in war-torn nations.

In the Pacific, the United States has built up a tremendous power, carefully directed at crushing Japan. The navy counts its campaign months ahead of schedule. Britain's best effort may well be directed toward cleaning out the Malay peninsula and the Dutch East Indies possessions.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 10 (P)—The Green Bay Packers capitalized on the errors of the new Boston Yanks for a 28-0 victory in an exhibition game between National Football League teams this afternoon before 17,372 spectators.

The Packers, perennial contenders for the Western division championship, blocked kicks to set up two touchdowns before they had made a first down, and set up another touchdown by recovering a fumble deep in Boston territory. Ivy Comp turned in the day's longest run, eighty-nine yards, with the second-half kickoff to pave the way for the fourth.

14 Horses Perish In Belmont Fire

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (P)—Trainer Max C. Hirsch today estimated at $230,000 the damage caused by a fire which destroyed thirteen race horses and his stable at Belmont Park race track on Long Island last night. Fourteen other horses were saved.

Arnold Hanger's Dit, seven-year-old gelding which has won a total of $87,956 since he began racing in 1939, was among those lost. Dit, by Transmute-Ingrid, finished third in the $15,000 Edgemere handicap at Aqueduct only a few hours before the fire.

A Difference Marked By a Randolph Bill

REPRESENTATIVE JENNINGS RANDOLPH, of the adjoining Second West Virginia congressional district, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives which gives emphasis to the difference between New Deal socialism and free enterprise with respect to taxation.

The Randolph bill would authorize the United States treasury to pay to the county of Monongalia, of which Morgantown with the state university is the seat, the sum of $135,793 in lieu of taxes which would have been collected save for government ownership of some important industrial property.

The property involved is the duPont plant, one of the war-born industries of the section. At the time the property was turned over to the federal government by the duPonts and thus taken from the tax duplicates, there was owing some $100,000 in taxes. The duPonts thought the government had assumed this obligation with the property. Federal officials thought otherwise. The Randolph "relief" bill is the result.

Three things are stressed by this attempted legislation. One is that the property now yields no taxes, has not since December, 1943, and will not so long as it remains in possession of the federal government. The second is that, if the tax claim is paid, it will be paid by the taxpayers and not from an inexhaustible treasury to which they do not contribute. The third is that, whatever comes of this legislation, the cost of local government in Morgantown and Monongalia county will be increased by the presence of this government-owned industry, and this would be true even if the federal government should be compelled to pay taxes on it.

The Job Ahead In the Pacific

PROGRESS in the war against the Japanese is so much greater than was expected by the duPonts, particularly in view of the vast offensive in Europe, that few persons stop to think of the handicaps under which the Allied forces in the Pacific are operating.

Rear Adm. James N. Irish, of the executive office of the secretary of the navy, brought out this point in an address to 30,000 workers at the New York navy yard in Brooklyn.

Right now, Admiral Irish said, the navy could use in the Pacific every ship that it possesses. He pointed out that ships in Pacific waters are steaming 200,000 miles, or more without having a satisfactory overhaul.

It happens that the faster the progress of the war in the Pacific, the greater the advantage the enemy possesses insofar as attacking Allied ships is concerned.

"As we approach the home islands of Japan," Adm. Irish said, "our enemies attain a natural advantage of position. From their home islands, land-based planes can and will attack our ships as they approach. We can only counteract that advantage by numbers of aircraft as well as in ships.

Thus it is understandable that navy officials have stated that no general cutback in procurement of supplies is expected when the European war ends.

Japan has undoubtedly made great preparations for protecting its home islands against assault, and the Japanese may be expected to fight desperately when American forces close in for the kill.

The Washington Rumor Factory

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has voiced his displeasure at what he terms the Washington rumor factory. His objection is to stories "from the capital credited to persons in high authority, or those designated as close to the administration. Often the information is sensational, and often it is untrue. While appearing to be authentic, as almost invariably they are, no actual news source is revealed.

What the president does not seem to realize, after long years of dealing with newspapermen, is that this condition is the natural result of his own reticence and equivocation. No newspaper correspondent would knowingly divulge any information detrimental to the war effort. The record in this respect is 100 per cent perfect.

But every newspaperman in the capital feels a deep obligation to his readers, and will go to any honest length to keep them informed. If this occasionally requires a bit of finagling, when sources that should be available are denied, well and good.

As for censorship, there always will be a difference of opinion as to what is war news and what political. It must be remarked the president hasn't been very helpful in matters of news which has been only administrative in character.

The whole story of Nelson's trip to China has not been told. Why Wilson resigned and Krug rushed into control of WPB had to be guessed at in the absence of official pronouncement. Washington correspondents, as do all good newspapermen, feel the people have a right to know what goes on. If they have to find the facts, it is all in the day's work.

A Free Press Emerges in France

A VIVID LESSON on the difference between the type of government of the Nazis and the Allies has been given by the emergence of the press in France.

Before the last shot was fired in the liberation of Paris, a score of newspapers which had been under ground since 1940 came out in the open. In spite of German efforts, these publications had been able to carry on during the entire period of Nazi occupation, had wide circulation and did much to help the cause of French patriots and the resistance movement.

One of the most important of these newspapers is the Defense de la France. Its story is typical of all the others. It began its existence in a cellar in July, 1941. Its directors estimate that more than 16,000 persons had a hand in its publication and circulation. Two hundred were arrested and shot by the Nazis. But the paper continued to appear. At the beginning circulation was 1,000 copies. Before the fall of Paris it had reached 400,000, printed and distributed under the noses of Nazi spies.

When the French capital was liberated, the plant of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, which strangely enough was not destroyed or damaged by the Nazis, was unlocked, its printing equipment greased and otherwise conditioned, and its presses were started rolling in the printing of newspapers, for the nonce confined to publication of "Yank," the overseas United States Army periodical.

This difference between a free press and a controlled press, which is undoubtedly appreciated by the liberated French people, should be brought home to Nazi subjects.

MacArthur Genius Deserves Tribute

CONSIDERING the big job Gen. MacArthur has faced and the amazing manner in which he is pushing it to success, his military genius is deserving of rich tribute.

A military observer told a war correspondent at Southwest Pacific general headquarters the other day that he was of opinion that the Philippines could be retaken with comparatively small casualties if Gen. MacArthur's New Guinea strategy is followed.

This officer pictured as a new concept of war the general's military genius of "hitting the Jap where he wasn't and luring him some place where we weren't."

The Aitape campaign was cited in which the Japanese, forced to attack frontally, lost at least 8,000 killed, and 10,000 estimated wounded against American losses of only 283 killed, 998 wounded and twenty-three missing.

The officer said that air attacks and landing parties convinced the Japs that Yank forces would hit between Wewak and Madang, on the New Guinea north coast. The Nipponese rushed forces to that sector from Hollandia, their big base. Then the Americans invaded Hollandia at virtually no cost in manpower. Some 60,000 Japs were cut off in the Aitape area and just recently what was left of them after malaria and starvation had taken their toll were "liquidated" when they launched desperate attacks to break out of the jungle.

The MacArthur tactics are more than clever and more than lucky. They represent real genius deserving an appreciation not currently given because of the attention centered on the Western Europe war operations.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

In his time the Browser has read hundreds of books, fiction or fancy, that describe the life of men on ships at sea; he has read scores of books written by or about men whose ships have been lost and who have been compelled by harsh necessity to fight their way to shore on raft or lifeboat. Not one of those books is the equal of Lars Skattebo's "Last Voyage of the Quen Sabe" (Harpers), a rusty old merchant ship that went down in one minute after it was struck by torpedoes a thousand miles off the African coast in the autumn of 1942.

Young Skattebo's story makes almost any other book about human beings in similar situations seem hollow and overblown and subtly or grossly fictionalized. . . . For the sake of his book, however, the author of this book was in some ways fortunate. The Quen Sabe was a fantastic ship. Built in 1914 in Germany, she still had her original engine and boilers; neither the ship nor her officers would have been allowed to go to sea under American registry. So she was a perfect specimen of the Panamanian flag and her crew was a strange mixture of Egyptians, Portuguese, Porto Ricans, Danes, Slovaks, Brazilians, one Negro, Americans, Englishmen, one Filipino and a Spaniard—some of whom knew their business and some of whom tragically did not. There were sixty-one men on board and thirty-three of these lost their lives when the ship went down.

There were no heroes on board, but in this polyglot crew in moments of great stress—when they were forced almost to the point of mutiny at a West African port by their captain's selfishness and neglect or when they had to sail their way back to an African port after the torpedoing—a feeling of human solidarity comes into being. Most of them come up from the very lowest depths of society and had shared a harsh struggle for survival in an open boat for seventeen days, but only four or five of them bothered to shake hands when they said their last goodbyes in an American port. And yet, ignorant, drunken, wasteful, sullen, suspicious and slovenly though they may be, Lars Skattebo's book makes most of them in human dignity.

He brings to his book the precious qualities of honesty, humor, and shrewdness of observation. This is just how it happened—and few other writers can say as much for the books they have written about this war.

William McFee's fifteenth novel "Ship to Shore" (Random House) is a typically shared book by a novelist who first won the Browser's heart many years ago when he wrote "Casualty of the Sea." The story begins in the summer of 1939, that fantastic summer when the golden age of the stock market crashed in hysteria and suicide.

Cartel Letter by Roosevelt Is Puzzling In View of Position Taken Heretofore

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Will the New Deal be able to persuade the other governments of the world to put their businessmen under anti-trust laws? Will the foreign governments which have themselves been maintaining cartels give up their monopolies?

These questions are suggested by the rather remarkable letter that President Roosevelt has just written to the secretary of state asking him to keep his eye on the whole subject of international cartels "because we are approaching the time when discussions will almost certainly arise between us and other nations."

For several months now the administration has been blasting away at private cartels as they have related to the Axis powers. But very little has been said about the cartels permitted by Great Britain, Brazil, Holland and other countries. It will be recalled that President Hoover conducted a crusade against the price-fixing maneuvers of the British-Dutch rubber monopoly and the coffee monopoly of Brazil as well as certain government-supported cartels in European countries. But his crusade failed because the United States government has no way of compelling other sovereign nations to adopt laws similar to ours.

It is, therefore, puzzling to see President Roosevelt writing a letter in which he states definitely that cartel practices will "have to be curbed and that this objective can be achieved only by collaborative action by the United Nations."

A Big Bite

If the president really intends to undertake this mammoth job of reforming the business practices of other governments as well as the citizens of other countries, he will certainly be biting off a large chunk. It may be, of course, that this is merely a step on the part of the Roosevelt administration looking toward the eventual establishment of the biggest cartel in the world, namely, the American government's complete control of its own foreign trade.

For it might well happen that if the other governments of the world declined to restrict their own citizens or to stop financing and otherwise supporting government cartels, the administration here—assuming Mr. Roosevelt's re-election—might take the position that in order to compete in the world there must be American cartels. Then, inasmuch as the New Deal does not believe in any monopoly except those entirely controlled by the New Deal itself, the next step is obvious. The cartels would have to be government-controlled in America, too.

An Ancient Problem

The division of trade throughout the world, and the allocation of territories so as to avoid competition as between areas and regions is one of the oldest problems in foreign trade. Unquestionably, American producers and shippers have been at a disadvantage because many of these foreign cartels have divided up the trade of the world between themselves and would like Americans to come in only under certain reciprocal conditions. Congress recognized this difficulty more than twenty years ago when it enacted the Webb-Pomeroy law granting to American producers the right to combine and consolidate and fix prices together whenever they were up against foreign combinations.

Undoubtedly some American business became so entangled with foreign cartels that when Axis governments wanted to get information, they tried to do it through some of their business sources in the United States. This is a political aspect which can be cured by a greater cooperation between the War and Navy departments on the one hand and our businessmen on the other, so that the latter would never be duped or deceived by requests for economic information that could be used against us in a military way.

More Behind Letter

It certainly does look as if there is a great deal more behind the president's letter to Secretary Hull than appears on the surface. For it doesn't seem possible that the Roosevelt administration thinks it can persuade Great Britain or Holland to give up their monopolies in rubber and the coffee monopoly of Brazil. Nations which have control of raw materials will insist upon fixing their own prices in the world markets competitively as they have before and allocating their own production.

Certainly the Russian government for many years has conducted practically all of its trade through a government corporation. Maybe that is what the Roosevelt administration is planning. Only the first step in the scheme has been revealed thus far, namely, the crusade against foreign cartels even when owned or controlled by foreign governments.

Dulles Has Odds In Tug-of-War For State Post

By CENTRAL PRESS

WASHINGTON — An inter-party tug-of-war goes on behind the scenes as Gov. Thomas E. Dewey blueprints his potential cabinet in anticipation of victory in November.

By now it is no secret that the New York governor, on the eve of his swing around the country, is leaning toward John F. Dulles, the 56-year-old lawyer and international expert who represented him in discussions on the Dumbarton Oaks conference, for secretary of state.

Dewey feels that Dulles has the world view and the view of international co-operation which is expressed in the Republican platform as drawn up at Chicago. There could be no charge of former isolationism against the able attorney from New York, and upon him, Dewey has leaned heavily for advice on international affairs.

Backing Dulles behind the scenes are many potent powers of the GOP. Such party figures as Senator Warren E. Austin of Vermont, are reported in Dulles's corner—although of course, it will be Dewey who does the deciding.

On the other hand, the conservative, older members of the party are urging that Herbert Hoover, the only living ex-president, be tendered the post of secretary of state if Dewey wins in November.

The odds just now are on Dulles, with some other key post going to Hoover, the party's elder statesman, if Dewey beats the fourth term drive of President Roosevelt.

An interesting sidelight on the political campaign is the battle between the Roosevelt administration and President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers union.

President Roosevelt has made what is generally regarded as a big bet for the United Mine Workers' vote by endorsing the Flannagan bill for re-enactment of the Guffey coal act, which regulated the bituminous coal industry and set up regional price schedules.

The United Mine Workers' Journal, on the other hand, has appealed not only to the miners but to organized labor generally to desert the "ex-New Dealers" who are described as "political buccanniers."

The Journal warned that if labor continues to follow the administration, the nation will wind up with "the same kind of labor movement as they have in Russia."

The president wrote a letter to Rep. John W. Flannagan, Jr., (D., Virginia), supporting his bill.

Administration politicians insist that Lewis cannot swing the mine vote. They recall that he opposed the president in 1940, and resigned as head of the C. I. O. when Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected for a third term.

Frog Hops Timed Well

Japanese boasts that they will have aerial superiority when American forces move into the Philippines are not worrying United States air experts in Washington, or pilots returning from the Southwest Pacific.

During the past year, since the grand American offensive began against Japan, American and Allied forces have not made a move without having all the air coverage they needed.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Adm. Chester Nimitz have timed their leap-frog invasions well, and have spaced them so that at no time were the Allied forces in serious danger from the Japanese air force.

When MacArthur moved westward into New Guinea, Nimitz provided enough carrier-based planes to knock out Japanese air and supply superiority, which thus was only temporary.

Once beachheads were established, airfields were constructed and land-based aircraft took over the job of providing cover and keeping Jap airmen away.

Now that the Navy has about 100 carriers of all types and land-based planes are moving into the war zones in a steady stream, it is not likely that the American high command will permit the Japs to get the upper hand in any war zone of their own choosing.

World Feeding Is On Wrong Track, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The propaganda for world-feeding by the United States is being started again among the government circles long interested in promoting that subject.

If Europe is not sufficiently hungry, or can be well handled by surplus army stores, let us feed China and India, where diets have been deficient for ages according to our standards.

Between a deficient diet and starvation is a great gulf, but they bridge it with "statistics" showing four-fifths of the peoples of the world do not eat as much as we do and hence must be starving.

The promoters were on the air a few days back with a new proposition, to wit:

Food production in the world must be increased, even doubled, and trebled, and these "starving" four-fifths required to eat it.

It is a smooth-sounding notion, and excellent politics, unless you get down to cases. What could make the farmers feel better, possibly good enough to vote for Roosevelt again, than the prospect of taking all limits on production, and solving their surplus problems of the last several decades by making those people eat enough, who do not live as we do?

On the same radio program, however, were representatives of starve India and Poland, who in their polite and very diplomatic way, seemed to respond:

"We may have people who are not well fed, but do you not realize the problem of feeding them permanently involves something more than accumulating more farm surpluses?"

But the world-feeding promoter just went ahead denouncing anyone opposed to increased production as a traitor to humanity, an obstructer of progress.

Constructive Thinking Needed

It is time someone started thinking constructively about the job, because it is one that should be done.

If left to these New-Dealing gentlemen, it will only accumulate more farm surpluses to be destroyed like the pigs or dumped in the ocean like Brazilian coffee, or allowed to spoil, or cause future ploughing under.

Plainly they are starting at the wrong end of reasoning or common sense, as usual.

To start at the right end, let us agree that for all feeding done, someone must pay. The food cannot be given away. If it is given to the Indians by our government, our taxpayers must pay for it. No one is proposing that our farmers raise it for nothing.

The problem, therefore, is not one of world food supply at all, but of world ability to pay. The way to attack the problem constructively, therefore, would be to aid the Indian or the Chinese get the money which would allow him to pay our prices. That is a far more difficult task.

Diet Different

Of course, I too am getting a little ahead of myself, by assuming the Chinese or Indian would even like our diet if he had the money to buy it.

Since the beginning of the world, his diet has always been different. Perhaps he thinks we are overfed and that we should take his diet. The custom of generations would have to be broken before he would want our food.

The natural thing for him to want to do is to grow more of the food he likes, his own food. This is a problem for him.

The hungry European nations are even now turning their backs on UNRRA so they can get started more swiftly to make themselves self-sufficient, and if they are wise they will not even want our country to rehabilitate themselves, thus running their nations into debt and under our influence and power. That is the way we, too, would want it if we were in their position.

Economic Problem

But assume the "undernourished" would take our food, then we must take something from him to pay for it, else he will not be on a self-sustaining level, but on charity, which is as demoralizing and retrogressive as an unpaid debt. Thus now it is purely an economic and a trade problem, not a farm problem in any sense, and cannot become a farm problem until we have performed the first two prerequisites.

(1) Created foreign desire for our diet, and (2) the foreigner produces something satisfactory to give as something in exchange.

This might require years for full success, but it is a goal worth working for in a constructive way. The other suggestions being promoted are fifty per cent politics and fifty per cent nonsense.

Nazis Must Guess On Where Allies Will Hit Next

By ELTON C. FAY

Associated Press War Analyst

For the third time in three disastrous months, the German high command finds itself in the position of trying to guess where the next major Allied blow will fall.

It guessed wrong on the landing point for the Allied invasion of Western Europe on June 6. Six weeks later it had its heaviest strength mustered at the wrong point when the Allies surged through Nazi lines at the base of the Cotentin peninsula and began plunging eastward.

Third and Last Guess

Now in this proverbial third and last guess the enemy's general staff must try to pick the point or points on the Siegfried line where the Allies will make their bid for breakthrough.

On D-Day, the German problem was only half that of today—they had the men, it should have been essentially a matter of getting them to the menaced point. Today they have less men, by 400,000, than on June 6 and the potential danger zone is as attenuated as that on the Atlantic coast three months ago.

Allied armies in force stand at the edge of the Siegfried zone in at least four places. They are within artillery range of Aachen, Germany, in the outer fringes of the zone; have moved into the little principality of Luxembourg; hold multiple bridgeheads on the east bank of the Moselle river in the area of Metz and are closing in on the fortress city of Belfort, near the French-Swiss border, which guards the pass into Southwestern Germany. Moreover, British and American forces in the Low countries are inching nearer to the Northern anchor of the line.

Germany Still Strong

There is little doubt that despite the extent of the military catastrophe suffered in France, sizable German forces, certainly numbering in the hundreds of thousands, have or will be able to reach the west wall defenses to augment whatever garrison the Nazis have scraped together since it became obvious that France was lost.

These diminished armies, however, must be prepared to defend five hundred miles of front.

The Siegfried line is not constructed as a solid line of concrete, but as a complicated and deep maze of strong points intended to delay an advance until manpower can be rushed in to deal with the offensive. The German general staff must decide in advance—where the pools of manpower should be centered for the defensive system.

The deployment of Allied forces before the line leaves the Germans in the dark whether thrusts will be made for a direct breakthrough near the center or flanking operations to the north or south—or both.
